To all Lovers of Choice Reading.

1. Your attention is respectfully invited to the character, contents, portrait embellishments, and sterling literary value of THE ECLECTIC MAGAZINE.

2. For fourteen years THE ECLECTIC has found favor with the public and high commendation from the press. It is now in its forty-fifth volume.

3. Its design is to present to its readers the choicest treasures of thought, and the ablest productions of European writers, as they appear in the Reviews and Periodicals of Great Britain.

4. Its beautified excellencies and permanent value give it a just claim to a place in every well-selected public and private library.

5. It contains the cream from seven Foreign Quarterlies.

6. It contains the cream from nine Foreign Monthlies.

7. It contains articles from the ablest pens of England.

8. Forty fine Steel Portraits embellish it in 1859.

9. The forty Portraits are worth the price of the work at 12½ cents each.

10. The subscriber gets double the worth of his money. Considering what it contains, THE ECLECTIC is the cheapest, the safest, the best, the most desirable of all the monthlies. Try it. You will find it true. It saves time. It saves money.

11. No intelligent family—no young lady—no young gentleman, will wish to be without its rich treasures of knowledge, when once examined.

12. Its instructive, educational influence on the mind are worth ten times its cost.

13. The public press, far and near, give THE ECLECTIC strong commendations. Eminent men do the same.

"The merits of THE ECLECTIC need only to be known in order to be appreciated. THE ECLECTIC is worth many times its cost."—New York Observer.

We have received many pages of commendation.

HAS REMOVED HIS OFFICE TO

WEBSTER BANK BUILDING,
13 Exchange Street, Boston.

PATENTS secured in the United States, and in all other patent granting countries. Specifications and drawings prepared. Caveats filed. Reconsiderations procured, of applications that have been rejected upon imperfectly prepared papers. Interferences prosecuted. Reissues and extensions procured, and in general, all business connected with the Patent Office transacted with care and promptness.

British and other foreign patents procured thro' prompt and confidential agents in London and Paris.

Persons residing at a distance may obtain all necessary information, and have their business transacted, by writing to the subscriber, without the trouble and expense of a visit to Washington.

He begs leave to refer those unacquainted with him to the following testimonials.—

From the Hon. Charles Mason, Commissioner of Patents.

U. S. Patent Office, Feb. 23, 1853.

I take great pleasure in stating that during the time I have been acting as Commissioner of Patents, Samuel Cooper, Esq., of Boston, has been engaged in soliciting, and has found in that capacity in constant correspondence and intercourse with the Office; he has evinced a thorough acquaintance with the Patent Law, and with the rules and practice of the office, a close attention to the interests of his clients, and a marked candor and courtesy that has rendered the transaction of business with him a pleasure. I have no hesitation in stating that I regard him as one of the very best agents for the transaction of business in this office with whom I am acquainted.

CHARLES MASON, Commissioner.

From the Examiners of the Patent Office.

The undersigned, Principal and Assistant Examiners in the United States Patent Office, have for several years been well acquainted with Mr. Samuel Cooper, late a principal Examiner in this office, and take pleasure in stating that he is a gentleman of the highest moral character, of unquestioned knowledge in the business and practice of the office, and that his scientific attainments are such as eminently fit him for the business in which he is about to engage.

EATON'S ARITHMETIC.

BANGOR, Oct. 30, 1858.

At a meeting of the School Committee, held this evening, it was ORDERED—That EATON'S ARITHMETIC be introduced into our Intermediate, Grammar and Select Schools, instead of Greenleaf's, now in use. Attest

(Signed) FRED'K E. SHAW, Sec'y.

The decided satisfaction which this book gives in the school room, and its unprecedented success, prove that it is a work of rare merit.

All those who are dissatisfied with the books now in use, are requested to give this an examination.

They will find it the most clear, concise, logical and practical treatise on written Arithmetic extant, following as it does the plan of Colburn's First Lessons—the two make a complete and popular series.

Copies furnished for examination on receipt of postage—16 cents—on application to

CHAPTER I.—THE NOCTURNAL VISIT.

* * * Whence is that knocking!
How is' with me when every sound appalls me?
* * * I hear a knocking
In the south entry! Hark!—more knocking!
SHAKESPEARE.

Hurricane Hall is a large old fam ly mansion, built of dark, red sandstone, in one of the lone est and wildest of the mountain regions of Virginia.

The estate is surrounded on three sides by a range of steep, gray rocks, spiked with stumps of dark evergreens, and called, from its horseshoe form, the Devil's Hoof.

On the fourth side the ground gradually descends in broken rock and barren soil to the edge of the wild mountain stream known as the Devil's Run.

When storms [illegible] were high, the loud roaring wind [illegible] the wild mountain gorges, and the terrific raging of the torrent over its rocky course, gave to this savage locality its ill-omened names of Devil's Hoof, Devils Run and Hurricane Hall.

Major Jos Warfield, the lonely proprietor of the Hall, was a veteran officer, who, in disgust at what he supposed to be ill-requited services, had retired from public life to spend the evening of his vigorous age on this his patrimonial estate. Here he lived in seclusion, with his old-fashioned housekeeper, Mrs Condiment, and his old family servants and his favorite dogs and horses. Here his mornings were usually spent in the chase, in which he excelled, and his afternoons and evenings were occupied in small convivial suppers among his few chosen companions of the chase or the bottle.

In person Major Warfield was tall and strongly built, reminding one of some old iron-limbed Douglas of the olden time. His features were large and harsh; his complexion dark red, as that of one bronzed by long exposure and flushed with strong drink. His fierce, dark gray eyes were surrounded by thick, heavy black brows, that, when gathered into a frown, reminded one of a thunder cloud, as the flashing orbs beneath them did of lightning. His hard, hatch face was surrounded by a thick growth of iron-gray hair and beard that met beneath his chin. His usual habit was a black cloth coat, crimson vest, black leather breeches, long, black yarn stockings, fastened at the knees, and morocco slippers with silver buttons.

In character Major Warfield was arrogant, domineering and violent—equally loved and feared by his faithful old family servants at home—disliked and dreaded by his neighbors and acquaintances abroad, who, partly from his house and partly from his character, fixed upon him the appropriate name of Old Hurricane.

There was, however, other ground to dislike besides that of his arrogant mind, violent temper and domineering habits. Old Hurricane was said to be an old bachelor, yet rumor whispered that there was in some obscure part of the world, hidden away from human sight, a deserted wife and child, poor, forlorn and heartbroken. It was further whispered that the elder brother of Le Warfield had mysteriously disappeared, and not without some suspicion of foul play on the part of the only person in the world who had a strong interest in his taking off. However these things might be, it was known for a certainty that Old Hurricane had an only sister, widowed, sick and poor, who with her son dragged on a wretched life at ill-requited toil, severe privation and painful infirmity, in a distant city, unaided, unsought and uncared for by her cruel brother.

It was the night of the last day of October, 1846. The evening had closed in very dark and gloomy. About dusk the wind sprang in the northwest, driving up masses of leaden rolled clouds, and in a few minutes the ground was covered deep with snow, and the air was filled with driving sleet.

As this was All Hallow Eve, the dreadful inclemency of the weather did not prevent the negroes of Hurricane Hall from availing themselves of their capricious old master's permission, to go off in a body to a barn breakdown held in the negro quarters of their next neighbor.

Upon this evening, then, there was left at Hurricane Hall only Major Warfield, Mrs Condiment, his little old housekeeper, and Wool, his body servant.

Early in the evening the old hall was shut up closely, to keep out as much as possible the sound of the storm that roared through the mountain chasms and cannonaded the walls of the house as if determined to force an entrance. As soon as she had seen that all was safe, Mrs Condiment went to beg and went to sleep.

It was about ten o'clock that night that Old Hurricane, well wrapped up in his quilted flannel dressing gown, sat in his well-padded easy chair before a warm and bright fire, taking his comfort in his own most comfortable bedroom. This was the hour of the costest enjoyment to the self-indulgent old Sabarite, who dearly loved his own ease. Very comfortable was Old Hurricane; and as he toasted his feet and sipped his punch, while his black servant, Wool, applied the warming pan to his cosy couch, he lazily hugged himself for enjoyment, and declared that nothing under heaven would or could tempt him to leave that room and that house and go out into that storm on that night. Just as he had come to this emphatic determination he was startled by a violent ringing of the door-bell. Ordering Wool to go and see what was the matter, he hastily arrayed himself in his sleeping habiliments and jumped into bed, determined not to be intruded upon, or to be called out of his room on any account whatever.

At this moment Wool reappeared.

'Shut the door, you villain! Do you intend to stand there holding it open on me all night?' vociferated the old man.

Wool hastily closed the offending portals, and hurried to his master's side.

'Well, sir, who was it rung the bell?'

'Sir, de Reverend Mr Parson Goodwin, and he say how he must see you yourself, personally, alone!'

'See me, you villain! Didn't you tell him that I had retired?'

'Yes, Massa, I tell him how you were gone to bed and asleep more'n an hour ago, and he ordered me to come wake you up, and say how it were a matter o' life and death!'

'Life and death? What have I to do with life and death? I won't stir! If the Parson wants to see me he will have to come up here and see me in bed.'

'Also I fetch Him reverence up, sir?'

'Yes, I wouldn't get up and go down to see Washington—shut the door, you rascal! or I'll throw the bootjack at your wooden head!'

Wool obeyed with alacrity and in time to escape the threatened missile.

After an absence of a few minutes he was heard returning, attending upon the footsteps of another. And the next minute he entered, ushering in the Rev Mr Goodwin, the parish minister of Bethlehem, St Mary's.

'How do you do? How do you do? Glad to see you, sir! glad to see you, though obliged to receive you in bed! Fact is, I caught a cold in this severe change of weather, and took a warm negus and went to bed to sweat it off! You'll excuse me? Wool, draw that easy chair up to my bedside for worthy Mr Goodwin, and bring him a glass of warm negus. It will do him good after his cold ride.'

'I thank you, Major Warfield! I will take the seat, but not the negus, if you please, to-night!'

'Not the negus! Oh, come now, you are joking! Why, it will keep you from catching cold, and be a most comfortable nightcap, disposing you to sleep and sweat like a baby!—Of course you spend the night with us!'

'I think you, no! I must take the road again in a few minutes!'

'Take the road again to-night! Why, man alive! it is midnight, and we know driving like all Lapland.'

'Sir, I am sorry to refuse your proffered hospitality and leave your comfortable roof to-night, and sorrier still to have to take you with me,' said the pastor, gravely.

'Take ME with you! No, no, my good sir! no, no, that is too good a joke—ha! ha!'

'Sir, I fear that you will find it a very serious one! Your servant told you that my errand was one of imminent urgency!'

'Yes, something like life and death——'

'Exactly—down in the cabin, near the Punch Bowl, there is an old woman dying——'

'There, I knew it. I was just saying there might be an old woman dying. But, my dear sir, what is that to me? What can I do?'

'Humanity, sir, would prompt you.'

'But, my dear sir, how can I help her? I am not a physician to prescribe——'

'She is far past a physician's help.'

'Nor am I a priest to hear her confession——'

'Her confession God has already received.'

'Well, and I'm not a lawyer to draw up her will.'

'No, sir, but you are recently appointed one of the Justices of the Peace or All-ge anys.'

'Yes, well, what of that? That does not comprise the duty of my getting up out of my warm bed and going through a snow storm to see an old woman expire.'

'Excuse me for insisting, sir, but this is an official duty,' said the parson, mildly but firmly.

'I'll—I'll throw up my commission to-morrow,' growled the old man.

'To-morrow you may do that, but mean while, to-night, being still in the commission of the peace, you are bound to get up and go with me to this woman's bedside.'

'And what the demon is wanted of me there?'

'To receive her dying deposition.'

'To receive a dying deposition? Good Heaven! was she murdered, then?' exclaimed the old man, in alarm, as he started out of bed and began to draw on his nether garments.

'Be composed—she was not murdered,' said the pastor.

'Well, then, what is it? Dying deposition? It must concern a crime,' exclaimed the old man, hastily drawing on his coat.

'It does concern a crime.'

'What crime, for the love of heaven?'

'I am not at liberty to tell you. She will do that.'

'Wool, go down and rouse up Jehu, and tell him to put Parson Goodwin's mule in the stable for the night. And tell him to put the black draught horses in the close carriage, and light both the front lanterns—for you shall have a dark, stormy road—Shut he door, you infernal!—I beg your pardon, ja on, but that villain always leaves the door ajar after him.'

The good parson bowed gravely; and the major completed his toilet by the time the servant returned and reported the carriage ready.

'In the Devil's Punch Bowl!'—was the order given by Old Hurricane as he allowed the minister into the carriage. 'And now, sir,' he continued, addressing his companion, 'I think you had better repeat that part of the church litany that prays to be delivered from battle, murder and sudden death, for if we should be so lucky as to escape Black Donald and his gang, we shall have at least an equal chance of being upset in the darkness of these dreadful mountains.'

'A pair of saddle mules would have been a safer conveyance, certainly,' said the minister.

Old Hurricane knew that, but though a great sensualist he was a brave man, and so he had rather risk his life in a close carriage than suffer cold upon a sure footed mule's back.

After many delays and perils, the past 7 and Old Hurricane arrived at their destination, called the Witch's Hut or Old Hal's Cabin.—In one corner of the hut, on a ragged couch, lay a gaby-hearted and emaciated woman, evidently near an end death. On being informed that a magistrate had arrived, she immediately everybody else leaving the room, as she would speak with him alone. Her request having been complied with, Old Hurricane drew from his pocket a Bible, administered the oath, and then said:

'Now then, my good soul begin—the truth the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, you know. But first, your name?'

'Is it possible you don't know me, master?'

'Not I, in faith!'

'For the love of heaven, look at me and try to recollect me, sir! It is necessary some one in authority should be able to know me, and the woman, raising her haggard eyes to the face of her visitor.

The old man adjusted his spectacles and gave her a sermonizing look, exclaiming at intervals—

'Lord bless my soul! it is! it am! I must! it can't be! Granny Grewell—the—I—the—midwife that disappeared from here some twelve or thirteen years ago?'

'Yes, master, I am Nancy Grewell, the ladies' nurse, who vanished from sight so mysteriously some thirteen years ago!' replied the woman.

'Heaven help our hearts! And for what crime was it you ran away? Come—make a clean breast of it woman! You have nothing to fear in doing so, for you are just the ar[illegible] of earthly law now!'

'I know it, master.'

'And the best way to prepare to meet the Divine Judge is to make all the reparation that you can by a full confession!'

'I know it, sir—I know it. I had committed a crime, but I have committed no crime, neither did I run away.'

'What! what! what!—What was it then! Remember, witness, you are on your oath!'

'I know that, sir, and I will tell the truth; but it must be in my own way.'

At this moment a violent blast of wind and hail roared down the mountain side and rattled against the walls, shaking the witch's hut, as if it would have shaken it about their ears.

It was a proper overture to the tale that was about to be told. For several minutes it was impossible to hear until the storm raved past and was heard dying in deep reverberating echoes from the depths of the Devil's Punch Bowl.

'It was some thirteen years ago,' began Granny Grewell, 'upon just such a night as this storm as this, that I was mounted on my mule Molly, with my saddle bags full of drugs, salves, and stilled waters and such, as I always carried when I was not 'tending on the sick. I was on my way a going to see a lady as I was sent for to tend.'

'Well, master! I am not afraid to say, as I never was afraid of man, beast, nor spirit, and never stopped at going out at all hours of the night, through the most lonesome roads, if so be I was called upon so to do.

'Still, I must say that just as me and Molly, my mule, got into the deep, thick, lonesome woods as stand around the old Hidden House in the hollow, I did feel queerish, 'cause it was the dead hour of night, and it was said how strange things were seen and heard, yes, and done too, at that dark, deep, and lonesome place. I am now even my mule Molly felt queer, for, by the way she stuck up her ears stiff as pins. So partly to keep up my own spirits and partly to encourage her, says I 'Molly, says I, what are ye afeerd on?' But a man M[illegible] But Molly stepped up cautious, and picked up her long ears all the same.

'Well, master, it was so dark I could not see a yard past Molly's ears, and it was so narrow and the bushes so thick, we could hardly get along, but just as we came to the little creek as they calls the Spring, where the waterjumps and jumps and tumbles empties into the Punch Bowl, a flash as Molly was cautiously picking her footing in the water, out starts two men from the bushes and seizes poor Molly's bridle!

'Good heaven!' ejaculated Mrs Warfield.

'Well, mas er, before I could cry out, one of them wild men seized me by the scruff of the neck, and with the other hand on my mouth he says:

'Be silent, you old fool or I blow your brains out!'

'And then master I saw for the first time that their faces were covered over with black crape. I could not scream if I tried let me, for my breath was gone, my eyes were jumping out with fear, I knew that was the me.

'Don't struggle, come along quietly and you shall not be hurt, said the man as had spoke before.

'Struggle! I couldn't struggle if I was my own [illegible] I couldn't speak, I couldn't breathe! I tried to have a fit, for I pitied Molly's back. One or two [illegible]

'Give her some brandy. And after she got a drink of it put to my lips and says, says he.

'Here, drink this.

'Well, master, she [illegible] the scruff of the neck I could not shake another was but one hand [illegible] and drink it. And as soon as I took a swallow my breath came back and my speech.

'And, sir, gentlemen,' says I, 'do this to our money or your life you must! I am desperate me!' Dead close to the Lady [illegible] him' [illegible] wrapped up in an [illegible] in a hole in the plat [illegible] corner at home, and if you take my life, you can go there and get it, you!

'You old blockhead, says [illegible] we want neither one nor t other! Come along quietly and you shall receive no harm. But if you first try or attempt to escape [illegible] you!' And with that the [illegible] the mouth of a pistol in his hand [illegible] smell of musk, which I [illegible] took up Molly's bridle [illegible] along. I couldn't see, in course, and I almost breathe for fear of the pistol. But I kept my prayers to myself all the time.

'Well, master, they led the mule down the path, until we came to a place wide enough to turn, when they turned us round and led us back out on the road and then round and round, and up and down and sideways and length ways, so as I didn't know me to find where they were taking me.

'Well, sir, when they took off the blind way, leading us through a strange place I knew we were in the woods somewhere [illegible] woods and in the very [illegible] the feet of the place at the [illegible] bushes, as we hit up against [illegible] and [illegible] tumbled [illegible] toward the house. We went down and down and down, and lower and lower and lower, until we got right down in the bottom of that hollow.

'Then we stopped. A [illegible] I put up my hand to raise the blindfold [illegible] and see where I was, but just [illegible] I felt he [illegible] the pistol like a ring of iron [illegible] growling [illegible]

'If you [illegible]—

'But I didn't—I drop[illegible] I was as still as a [illegible] I had been at such a thing before. So we went [illegible] and up a gravelly walk—I knew it by the crackling of the gravel under Molly's feet—and stopped at a horse-block, where one of the villains lifted me off. I put up my hand again.

'Do, if you dare,' says he, 'and I'll make the pistol at your head.

'I dropped my hand like lead on my lap. He led me along a little way, and then up some steps. I counted them to myself as I went along. They were six. Now, sir, master, I took all this pains to show you the door-steps.—Then they opened a door that opened in the middle. Then they went along a long passage and up more stairs—there was ten and a turn and then ten more. Then all of a sudden we passed a passage and up a third flight of stairs. They was shaky.

'Well, sir, here we were at the top of the house. One of them villains opened a door on the left side, and t'other said—

'There—go in and do your duty' and push me through the door, and shut and locked it on me. Good gracious, sir, how I rested I was! I slipped off the silk handkerchief, and tested as I was, I didn't forget to put it in my bosom.

'Then I looked about me. Right before me on the hearth was a little weny fire, burning that showed I was in a great big garret with sloping walls. At one end two deep dormer windows, and a black walnut bure standing between them. At t other end a great tester bedstead with dark curtains. There was a dark carpet on the floor. And with all there were so many dark objects and so many shadows, and the little taper burned so dimly that I could hardly tell t'other from which, or keep from breaking my nose against things as I groped about.

'And what was I in this room for to do? I couldn't even form an idea. But presently my blood ran cold to hear a groan from behind the curtains—then another—and another—then a cry as of a child in mortal agony, crying:

'For the love of Heaven, save me!'

"And what did you see?" asked the magistrate.

"Sure, sighed there fell upon me if ever a young woman was lying about the bed, flinging her hat and beautiful white clothes, and sobbing wildly as the floor [illegible] her tresses. Her eyes were [illegible] Bet, [illegible] that wasn't what almost made me faint—it was that her right hand was covered up in [illegible] and her white hair and hand [illegible] covered up to [illegible] sweet flower, and [illegible] sweetly as sight her breast, leaving only a small slit at the lips and [illegible] to breathe through."

Congressional.

WASHINGTON, 9th.

SENATE.—Nothing of importance has yet transpired. A long tariff debate is anticipated.

A resolution by Mr King of N. Y., directing an inquiry into the working of the Canadian Reciprocity Treaty and the expediency of its abrogation was adopted.

The Senate resumed the consideration of Mr Bigler's resolution that a large public debt is inconsistent with the true policy of the country, and that Congress should proceed without delay, to adjust the revenue and expenditures

Mr Toombs of Ga., proceeded to reply to Mr Bigler's speech of yesterday, and went over it section by section, showing that he first paragraph of the resolution merely expressed a truism that it is inconsistent in time of peace to incur a large public debt, at the trumm, however, depending on whether the debt be casual or permanent deficiency, and that the second section assumed this deficiency to be inevitable, and fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians. Mr Toombs proceeded to demonstrate that it is not only avoidable but ought to be avoided, and that there is not only no necessity to keep the expenditures at their present standard, but that the present tariff is ample to meet the just and proper expenses of the government. The Secretary of the Treasury estimated for the five years prior to 1857 show a revenue exceeding the expenditures. Finding that there was a revenue of $55,000,000 and an expenditure of $65,000,000, the tariff was reduced without party discussion, South Carolina and Massachusetts unitedly doing it. He did not propose by his vote on the tariff of 1857, to cripple any branch of the public service, and he did not propose it now.

Mr T. spoke further in the same strain, when the subject was postponed.

Mr Hunter of Va. attempted to bring up the consular and diplomatic bill, and Mr Biddell of La was equally anxious to have up the Cuban question.

A lengthy discussion ensued, in which the leading Republican Senators expressed themselves against taking up the latter, though ready at any time when required to do sense all its business

The Cuban bill was finally taken up by a vote of 27 against 18, when Mr Biddell, by consent, made a textual correction of the clause of the bill providing for five per cent bonds, payable semi annually.

Mr Doolittle of Wis., made some remarks, and offered a substitute appropriating fifty millions to enable the President to purchase of Yucatan, Central or South America, territory on which a free negro nation can be located under the guarantee of the United States

Adjourned.

HOUSE.—A reply was received from the Secretary of the Treasury in answer to a resolution asking why the building of a Court house at Baltimore had been delayed.

The Secretary says he has postponed all authorized public buildings which had not been commenced previous to the late revulsion and should continue postponement until Congress provides the funds.

A discussion ensued during which Mr Latrobe Md. called attention to the fact that for building the Baltimore Custom house and moved to refer the communication to the Committee of Ways and Means with instructions to report a bill appropriating that sum.

Mr Curry moved a substitute instructing the Committee report a bill repealing all laws authorizing construction of Post Offices, Customs and Court buildings where no contracts have been made. Ruled out.

Mr Harris' motion was adopted.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of amendments to the appropriation bill

The executive appropriation bill was considered and the striking out of the following items contained in: $200,000 for mileage of next Congress, $10,000 for repair of furniture and boxes for members; upwards of $7000 for the Congressional Globe; $100 000 for Sun Pretrance; $ $23,000 for New York Assay Office $225 000 for purchasing property now leased by New York District Courts and a few smaller items, and adding $175,000 to supply deficiencies in printing appropriations

The bill then passed by 18 majority.

Mr Branch, from the Foreign Committee, reported back the Cuba $30,000,000 bill. Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr Davis of Miss., gave notice that when the bill comes up he should move to strike out the word "purchase" and substitute "take"

Mr Phelps of Mo., reported the post office reorganization bill.

The House then proceeded to consider the Nebraska contested seat, but without concluding, and adjourned.

WASHINGTON, 9th.

The rumored difficulty between Mr Sickles and Mr Butterworth is entirely without foundation. There has been no interruption whatever of their friendly relations.

The Secretary of the Treasury asks that power be given to discontinue from time to time, such light-houses as may become useless by reason of the mutations of commerce or otherwise, and to restrict the creation of new lights as such as shall be reported on favorably by the Light-House Board.

The drafts paid and drafts issued by the Treasury Department last week amounted to $ $3,000,000

A report is credited that Gen Jesup will shortly resign the office of Commissioner of Indian Affairs with the view of retiring to California.

The Central National Hotel Club have resolved to withhold the publication of their letter to the people until Mr Botts shall have delivered his speech on the 22d inst in New York.

The Aztecas, Mexican and Central American Association is now chartering vessels to take out emigrants under the directions of Gen Henningsen

The Democratic caucus of the tariff men at the Capital to night. Mr Jones of Tenn. was elected to the chair and Messrs Jenkins and Davison were chosen Secretaries.

Mr Phelps of Mo, offered a resolution that the temporary necessities of the government should be met by an extension of the law authorizing the issue and re-issue of treasury notes for the period of two years, that the appropriation bills ought to be acted on as speedily as possible and that the expenditures of the government ought to be reduced to the lowest point consistent with the wants of an economical administration of the government.

A debate took place on the various propositions and finally the resolutions of Mr Phelps were adopted

A noticeable feature of the proceeding was the defeat by 27 against 25 on Mr Crawford's motion, declaring it inexpedient to alter the tariff of 1857. It was understood that the members were not to be bound by the action of the caucus.

LEGISLATURE OF MAINE.

TUESDAY, 8th.

In the Senate.

Order from the House for the appointment of a Joint Select Committee, to consider the expediency of making the office of Secretary of State and other State officers elective by the people, was passed in concurrence; and the Senate joined Messrs Burgess, Wing and Davis.)

On motion of Mr Marshall.

Ordered, That the Committee on the Judiciary be requested to inquire into the expediency of providing by law that claims against towns in favor of individuals shall not be barred in cases of assumpsit until twenty years after the date of the claim.

Mr McClusky presented the petition of David Dudley and als, of Presque Isle, for the passage of a law to enable John Allen to purchase more land. Referred.

On motion of Mr Anderson.

Ordered, That the committee on Railroads, Ways and Bridges be instructed to inquire into the expediency of a law requiring ticket offices, at Railroad Stations, to be open for sale of tickets half an hour before the time advertised for trains to depart. Adjourned.

In the House.

Mr Whitehouse of Smithfield, from the Committee on Interior Waters, to whom was referred the petition of C. M. Ray and others against the use of bag nets in taking fish in the Penobscot river, made report ordering notice.

Mr Shaw, of Greenville, from the same Committee, on petition of Benjamin Goodwin of Dresser and others of Bangor, for leave to extend a wharf into the Penobscot river, beyond low water mark, made report ordering notice. Also on petition of John Lynch and others for power to build dams. Also on petition of Abraham Woodard et als. for incorporation to supply Bangor with water from Pushaw Lake, ordering notice.

Passed to be engrossed—Bill an act to incorporate the Master, Wardens and Members of King Solomon's Lodge; Resolve authorizing an extension of a portion of the State Loan, as amended.

NEW BILL.—The new bell was placed in the belfry yesterday. Its weight is 1244 pounds, and its pitch is G. Its tone has not as yet been tested. The old bell was cast by Revere in Boston, in 1798, and weighed 1078 pounds. Many people had an idea that it came from England. The inscription on the old bell was,

"The living to the church I call,
And to the grave I summon all."

Canker Remedy & Pain Reliever.

STRONG TESTIMONY. The following certificate of a remarkable cure wrought by this valuable remedy, will, no doubt, command attention and convince every one that this medicine has extraordinary virtues. Read, read!

This may certify that I have been a great sufferer and lame with inflammatory rheumatism, for 16 years in the mean time I have tried many outward applications and different Liniments, but found no relief. The first of October, 1858, I began to use Rev T. Hill's Canker Remedy and Pain Reliever. The first application gave relief of pain in less than 10 hours, and began to reduce the swelling the next morning in three days the pain and swelling was wholly gone. ALBERT LYFORD
